Graduate Certificate in Museum Studies

The Museum Studies core curriculum is the basis for the graduate certificate, which emphasizes the essential interdisciplinary and collaborative nature of museum work by drawing on a range of departments in the University. The program allows students to gain knowledge in preparation for doctoral study, as well as for employment in museums and related fields such as historic preservation, cultural resource preservation, archives, and government agencies.

We accept Graduate Certificate applications from current KU graduate students for fall and spring entry. We do not offer a standalone Graduate Certificate for non-KU students. Please note, you must apply for formal admission to the certificate prior to completing the final coursework requirement.
